Homemaker Hints

By Rebeca M. Johnson, Extension Agent

Summer is finally here, and for many families this means that chicken is on the menu. A favorite year 'round, chicken is especially popular now, partly due to the high cost of meat.

Many homemakers don't realize how important it is to store, cook, and handle poultry properly. Improper care can result in food poisoning, which can mean diarrhea, nausea, abdominal pain, and vomiting, none of which is very pleasant.

Follow these guidelines to keep poultry free from contamination.

— Keep poultry and other perishable foods refrigerated if you will use them within a few days. The refrigerator temperature should be between 35 degrees and 40 degrees F. For longer storage, freeze poultry.

— Using soap and hot water, clean all surfaces on which raw poultry has been prepared. Wooden cutting boards should be treated with chlorine bleach after washing. Never place food on the same surface used to prepare raw poultry unless you have carefully cleaned the surface.

—Wash knives, spoons, other utensils, and dishes after contact with raw poultry. Wash your hands well.

— Defrost poultry in the refrigerator. If you must thaw it more quickly, put the poultry in a waterproof plastic bag, seal tightly, and place under COLD running water.

—Cook turkey to an internal temperature of 185 degrees F. Never partially cook it and finish cooking later. If you want to stuff it, do so right before roasting.

—Make sure poultry leftovers are reheated until they are HOT throughout. Bring gravy to a full rolling boil.

— Never allow cooked poultry to stand at room temperature after serving. Food may not be safe to eat if held at temperatures where food poisoning bacteria grow rapidly.

— A good rule is to keep hot foods HOT (140 degrees F) and cold foods COLD (below 40 degrees F). This keeps bacteria (like salmonella) from growing.

Be extra careful with fire!

The most spirited Spring meeting in a long time has just come to a close at First Baptist Church. The meeting was well attended each night, and Rev. John Beamon poured out his soul to thos e who attend. Everyone enjoyed the fellowship at First Baptist last week. The singing was lovely each evening, with Rev. Beamon's choir from Bedford, along with other choirs from visiting churches throughout the week. The offering for the week was very good. All went home feeling very lifted, after attending the revival services last week. The closing theme, was "Running a Race For God." At the close of the sermon Rev. Miller, pastor of Gravel Hill Baptist Church, and Ms. Berry, a membsr of Mt. Airy Baptist Church, sang beautiful solos, in conjunction with the sermon, "Running a Race for God." The music for the evening was very impressive and also throughout the week. The Rev. John Beamon charted a bus load of his good people from Bedford, each evening through the revival services.

In route home, she and the Steven girls, visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vassette Harris. We were happy to find the Harris family doing nicely healthwise. Garbage Dumped Violates Law

Some one has chosen to use Purdum's Branch in the Town of Appomattox as a garbage dump as can be seen in the picture above.

This dumping is in violation of State Article No. 62.1-44.17 of the State Water Control Law as ammended in 1970 by the General Assembly which prohibits the dumping of trash, garbage or other waste into streams.

This creates a problem for town forces who will have to remove this garbage from the stream.
